There was a boy named Jack. He never ate what his mother told him to. He ate candy and unhealthy food. He only liked one type of fruit ... strawberries ... which had to have lots of fudge on them!

His mom said, "If you can't eat strawberries without fudge, then you can't have any at all!"

Jack said, "Fine I will eat them plain!"

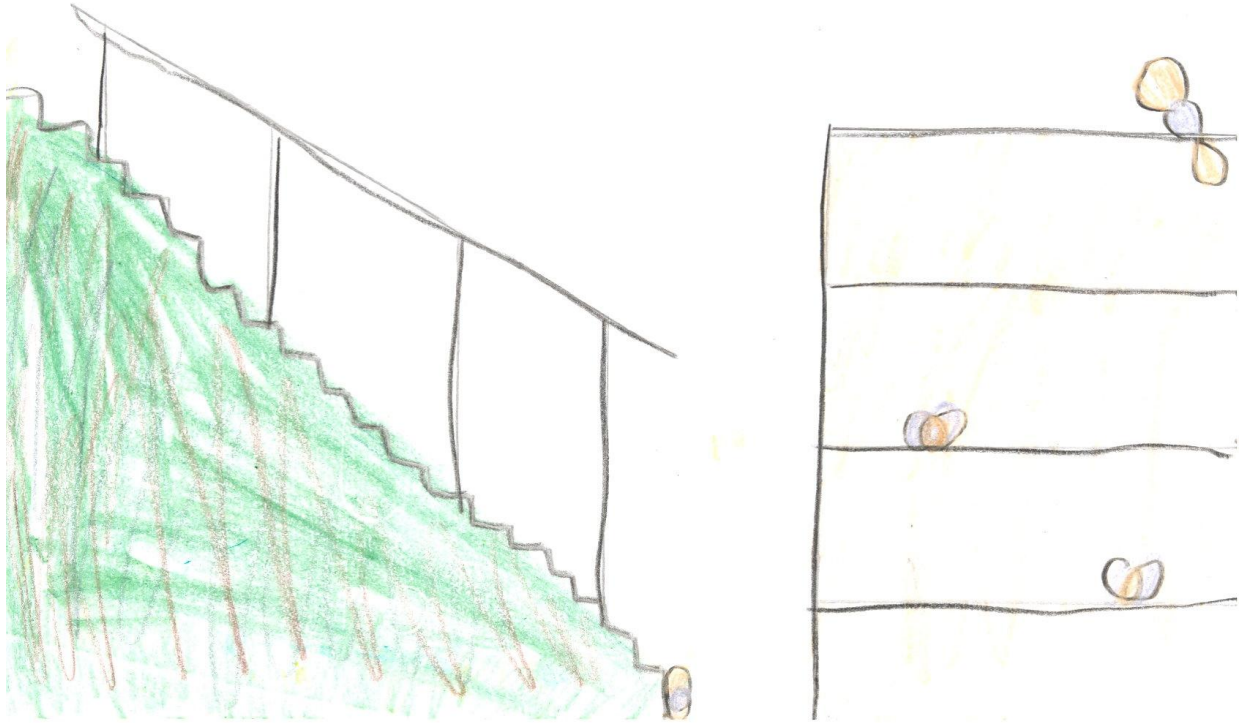

But when his mother gave him plain strawberries, he gave them to his dog

Max or just went to the trash can and threw it away.

But of course his mother knew,
so he never ever had them again.
Jack didn't mind. Jack kept eating candy. So Jack's mom had to hide the candy in the basement.

Anyhow, Jack knew where she hid them. So when his mom didn't look, he got some. But one day, Jack had to go to the dentist. The dentist found seven cavities! He admitted to the dentist that he ate at least 10 pieces each day!

His mom was way too shocked to talk. So Jack's mom kept silent.
Jack was furious. So he threw a tantrum!
The dentist talked to him about eating healthier food, but Jack just pretended to listen.

His mom took him home.
Jack went into his room. Jack started to jump on his bed. His mom came charging to his and said, "Get your feet off your bed.!" But Jack stood on his bed as still as an icicle.

So his mom picked him up
and put him down on the floor. But that very day, Jack got sick, and when his mother gave
him medicine, Jack's mom said,
"Do you want candy?"

Jack said, "No!" "No?" said Jack's mom.
So his mom brought him healthy food, and Jack loved it! The medicine cured him so that he couldn't say "more candy." His mom made the medicine. Now she was the sneaky one!

NO MORE CANDY!"
